In this issue of The Bridge, we feature the Annual NCASG Conference, of which Louisiana State Civil Service was a host. This conference brought together professionals to discuss compensation and classification issues of state government employees. It was both enlightening and educational!

The CPTP/Workforce Development Division is now piloting Executive Retreats. The article on page 2 has more information on this new endeavor. Louisiana Job Connection, featured on page 4, is a great, new tool for recruiting and connecting with potential job applicants. Also, check out the newest video, Political Do’s and Don’ts for Classified Employees, on the SCS YouTube Channel.

I would like to congratulate my staff on receiving the 2014 Customer Partnership Award at the 13th Annual NEOGOV Training Conference. Also, congratulations to current Civil Service Commission member D. Scott Hughes, former member Kenneth Polite, and the other recipients of the 2014 Monte M. Lemann Award for their support of Louisiana’s merit system of public employment.

Prohibited Political Activity

In the height of this year’s election cycle, it is important to remember that as classified state employees, Article X, Section 9 of the State Constitution governs our participation in political activities. The U.S. Supreme Court has recognized the right of a state to restrict such activity in order to avoid the appearance of such support. This means that classified state employees must avoid the ACTUAL support of a candidate, party, or faction, and avoid the APPEARANCE of giving such support.

SCS has produced a video entitled Political Do’s and Don’ts for Classified Employees, which details the political activities in which classified employees can and cannot participate. You can view the video here.

Louisiana State Civil Service was excited to host the 2014 National Compensation Association of State Governments Pay Conference in New Orleans, Louisiana, October 5-8, 2014. Director Shannon Templet welcomed professionals from across the nation to discuss current issues related to compensation and classification of state government employees. For three days in the Crescent City, member states were enlightened, entertained and educated by an array of talented speakers, member state reports, and annual survey results.

The National Compensation Association of State Governments was formed in 2010 when the Central and Southeastern Compensation Associations merged. The NCASG provides a network to exchange valuable knowledge and information between compensation professionals within state governments. The organization also conducts three annual NCASG surveys, which include a salary survey, a benefits survey, and a pay practices survey. Louisiana is responsible for the pay practices survey.

The conference brought together a collection of gifted speakers who spoke on a variety topics ranging from federal wage and hour explanations, to administering total rewards. An important part of the conference is the sharing of perspectives and experiences by compensation and classification professionals. A panel discussion offered ideas and solutions to current concerns of personnel changes related to agency consolidations, as well as how to address the span of control. The panel discussion provided several recommendations ranging from the idea of eliminating span of control to redesigning the classification plan in order to provide more flexibility for those high demand job titles. Another informative part of the conference was the presentation of each state’s report, which provided an overview of each state’s current problems and their solutions. The session offered an opportunity for an open forum as member states offered their insight on current issues.

Next year’s annual NCASG conference will be in Charleston, West Virginia. If you are currently working in administering compensation for Louisiana state employees, be sure mark your calendar for next year’s event, which is generally scheduled in early fall. Plan to check the NCASG website for conference agenda updates as well as early registration discount details in the coming year.

The Roth Option: Is It Right for You?

Starting in January 2015 you may elect to make ROTH contributions to your Deferred Compensation account. ROTH contributions can begin as early as the first paycheck in February. But how do you know if it is right for you? Read on to find out.

The Roth 457 Option essentially “locks in” today’s tax rates on all contributions.

For some people—especially those who expect to be in a higher tax bracket when they retire—the Roth 457 option may make the most sense. If you’re one of those people, the Roth option allows you to pay taxes on your contributions when they are contributed (presumably at a lower tax rate than you would expect to pay at retirement). If you expect to be in a lower tax bracket when you retire, you might want to consider contributing to your 457 on a before-tax basis. You won’t pay taxes on your contributions or any earnings on your contributions until you take a distribution, which is usually at retirement (when many people expect their retirement earning power and tax burden to be lower than they are today).

Regardless of which type of contributions you choose, the important thing is to contribute as much as you can today for your retirement tomorrow. If after you’ve done your research and consulted the experts you decide that Roth 457 contributions are right for you, you can make the appropriate changes to your account by completing a Salary Deferral Agreement form, and soon you will be able to make changes to this designation by visiting the website at LouisianaDCP.com or calling KeyTalk® at (800) 701-8255.
